For School Building Committee

Advocates, not experts

By Neil Fater

The School Committee and selectmen chairmen have told Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski that it's more important for School Building Committee members to be advocates for the project than to be knowledgeable about construction.

"Working together, and those kinds of qualities really are the critical ones," School Committee Chairman Eric Nadworny told Stapczynski Tuesday.

Selectmen Chairman John Hess echoed Nadworny, saying Stapczynski should select committee members who can gather support for the multi-million dollar project.

"Some people might be knowledgeable about (construction), but they might not be as good an advocate," said Hess.

Stapczynski will ask selectmen to confirm his appointments to the new building committee Monday, June 21.

In response to neighborhood concerns, Andover's top fire and health officials have reviewed the chemicals that will be used and stored by a Cambridge company hoping to relocate to Andover, off Dascomb Road.

Their conclusion? There's "nothing unusual."

"We still have nothing untoward here, certainly nothing like some other companies have," says Fire Chief Harold Wright of California Products Corporation's current operation. "Basically, I've seen nothing that changes my opinion."

Wright says 75 percent of existing Andover companies pose a greater potential danger than California Products would.

Wright has approved a request by California Products for a license to keep and store 184,200 gallons of inflammable products, 3,000 of which are liquids that can catch fire without being preheated.

The license is needed because California

Local man killed in crash

Jason D. Moody, a Burnham Road father and North Reading police officer, died just after midnight Wednesday morning in a three-vehicle accident in Salisbury.

Born in 1969, Moody had been with the North Reading department for five years.

"He was an outstanding officer, very street smart, and he had a good rapport with the youth of North Reading," says North Reading Detective Thomas Romeo. "He was a very proud father and husband."

Romeo says Moody had been married within the last year to his wife, Susan.

According to Salisbury police, Moody and another North Reading officer, James J. McCormack, 37, of North Reading, were off duty and riding their motorcycles at the time of the accident. They collided with a Jeep Cherokee that was heading north on Route 1 about 12:12 a.m.

Both men were lying on Route 1 when Salisbury police officers arrived at the scene, responding to calls about a serious accident.

The two off-duty officers were taken to Anna Jacques Hospital in Newburyport, where Moody was pronounced dead at the

Celebrating 90 years

Nearly 100 relatives and friends gathered last Sunday at the British Club in South Lawrence to celebrate the long life and 90th birthday of former Andover resident Ina Donohue.

And the celebration was especially gratifying to her younger siblings, Janet Jewell and Lee Reed, along with her many descendants, because Mrs. Donohue was scheduled to travel to America on the ill-fated Titanic when she was only 3 years old, but missed the voyage.

The family came to America from Dundee, Scotland. "My father had come over earlier, and sent my mother either the money or the tickets," says Janet Jewell, who is 11 years younger than her sister, "and I'm not sure why they missed it. I think my mother was sick. Maybe it was just the excitement of traveling alone with a little daughter. And, of course, in those days, you had to travel here by water."

Whatever the reason, Mrs.

Donohue and her mother missed the Titanic and made it safely across the ocean on another ship.

Mrs. Donohue grew up in Andover, moved to Lawrence when she married, "because that's where her husband was from," says her sister, raised four children and then moved back to Stowe Court after her husband died, where she lived for about 14 years, before moving to the Mary Immaculate Adult Health Center in Lawrence.

The party, which included entertainment by Andover's Bob Johnson, bagpipe major in Clan McPerson, who played Happy Birthday, Scotland the Brave and several other tunes.

The party was planned by Mrs. Donohue's daughter Janice Donohue Mallett.

"There were so many grandchildren there, I think there were more kids than adults," says Jewett. "I can't even tell you the number of tables we had."

New directory of elder services is out

Finding information about services and programs for elders will be much easier now.

Elder Services of the Merrimack Valley Inc. has published the 25th anniversary edition of The Green Book, a handy consumer's guide to resources in the Merrimack Valley. The directory contains 81 categories of resources, including Alzheimer's disease, councils on aging, senior centers, elder care management, home health care, housing options, legal assistance, meals on wheels, nursing homes, transportation and volunteer opportunities.

Copies are available at no cost at senior centers in the Merrimack Valley and upon request from Elder Services by those unable to visit the local site.

Funding the printing of The Green Book was provided by Tufts Health Plan, Secure Horizons and Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates in Chelmsford.

Reps Finegold, Nangle set office hours

State Rep. Barry Finegold, D-Andover, will hold office hours Thursday, June 24, at the Andover Senior Center at Whittier Court from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. and Memorial Hall Library on Elm Square from 6 to 7 p.m.

State Rep. David M. Nangle, D-Lowell, will also hold office hours that day at Memorial Hall Library from 6-7 p.m.

Title V seminars are now monthly

A public seminar is now scheduled monthly to assist residents, realtors, contractors and others in understanding the requirements of Title V, the Massachusetts Environmental Code, dealing with septic systems.

The program describes the structure, use and maintenance of septic systems, their inspections, interpretations of inspection results, requirements if they fail inspection and procedure for obtaining the all-important septic system "Certificate of Compliance."

For scheduling, call Dan Tremblay, health officer, Monday-Friday, between 8 and 10 a.m. at 623-8298.

For the record

A story in the Townsmen's special Andover High School Graduation section June 10 contained several errors in reporting on a speech by Heather Norton.

Norton was Andover High School class of 1993, not 1994. She attended the University of New Hampshire, and while there was on the university's ice hockey team that won two national championships, but she never played on the U.S. Olympic hockey team. She did work for CBS Sports, covering the Olympic hockey team.

Surfing all the way from Japan to Andover

There are either 51 very curious or very bored Japanese surfing the Web.

That's the number of Japanese computer users who have taken a hit of Andover's official Web site, a site that has become increasingly, if only modestly, popular during the past few years.

While the town's official site attracted fewer than 4,000 hits in April 1997, there were about 10,000 hits in April 1998 and more than 22,000-hits this April.

The vast majority of "hits," or visits to the electronic site, are from the general area, with 98 percent of them coming from within the United States.

But some foreign computer users have paid a virtual visit. The Japanese lead the international way with 51 hits, followed by Canadians with 43 and people from both the Netherlands and the United Kingdom with 29.

People can be added to a mailing list to receive periodic e-mail updates about the site by sending a request to "webupdates@town.andover.ma.us" says Buzz Stapczynski, town manager.

Town officials say they want this list to "help make the Web page a more effective communication tool by keeping interested residents informed of the material that is available online."

No encore for Encore

Encore Books, a newcomer in name only to Shawsheen Plaza, probably won't be around long enough to attract much fanfare.

The bookstore, formerly called Royal Discount Books, reportedly will soon be closed by parent company Lauriat's.

Lauriat's plans to close its financially troubled Northeast chain of bookstores, including Lauriat's, Encore and Book Corner stores, according to published reports.

Employees at the Encore Books in Andover seem somewhat unclear on exactly what will happen to them in the coming weeks.

They're insiders — Norman Viehmann, of Lucerne Drive, and Martin Epstein, of Bancroft Road, recently got an inside look at the legislative process by participating in the Citizens' Legislative Seminar at the Statehouse, at the invitation of state Sen. Sue Tucker, D-Andover (center). The 18-hour program featured presentations by a number of legislators, including Senate President Thomas Birmingham.

"We're kind of in limbo right now, but we are closing," says Susan Holdsworth, assistant manager of the Andover store.

Encore Books was known as Royal Discount Books until May 11, when Lauriat's changed the store name. Letters spelling "Royal" still adorn the facade above the store, although a small sign announcing the new name hangs above the door.

"We were just consolidated. Lauriat Inc. owed Encore and Royal, but they wanted to make it all one discount chain," says Holdsworth.

Now under its new name, it appears the store will soon close.

A call to Lauriat's CFO Todd Miller was not returned by press time.

In wake of layoffs, Raytheon defends tax breaks

By Taylor Armerding

Talk to officials of Raytheon Co., the defense giant with a major operation in Andover, and they will tell you that a corporate tax break granted to the company by the state three and a half years ago is an unqualified success.

"It has been good for the state and good for the company," says Raytheon spokesman David Polk, of the legislation that is worth about $20 million a year to the company.

But talk to critics of Raytheon, including the union that represents a majority of Raytheon workers, plus a number of state legislators, and they are less convinced that it has been so good.

They have watched as Raytheon swallowed up other companies like Hughes Electronics Corp. and Texas Instruments, and trimmed thousands of jobs while "restructuring."

The union, Local 1505 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, recently filed an unfair labor practice grievance with the National Labor Relations Board, complaining that the company was refusing to provide financial information that would prove it has kept its Massachusetts payroll at 90 percent or more of what it was on Jan. 1, 1996, when the tax break took effect.

Polk declined to say if Raytheon had or would turn over that information, but does contend, "there is no question that we have met the criteria (required by the tax break)."

But in the wake of another 61 layoffs announced this past week at Raytheon's Advanced Device Center in Andover, some state legislators are now calling for the strings attached to that tax break to be modified, to require Raytheon to maintain a certain number of jobs, rather than a particular payroll level.

Also, the Tax Equity Alliance of Massachusetts, an organization that generally lobbies for higher taxes on the wealthy, is calling for Raytheon to stop the job cuts.

TEAM's Nora Ranney said this week that the group is not calling for the elimination of the tax break, "but if it was supposed to create jobs, then that's what it should do."

State Sen. Sue Tucker, D-Andover, is not quite ready to go that far, saying this week she is leery of "micro-managing corporate decisions in a global economy."

That doesn't mean she's happy, however. "If in fact it (the tax break) has been such an unqualified success, how do they explain the loss of thousands of manufacturing jobs?"

Polk doesn't try to do that, but implies that things could have been a lot worse without the tax break.

"When you compare, from a percentage point of view, the number of jobs that Massachusetts has lost compared to Texas and Arizona, Massachusetts looks pretty good," he says, adding that when the tax break was being contemplated in 1995, "defense spending was spiraling downward. Clearly something had to be done to maintain competitiveness in Massachusetts."

Polk says the company does not anticipate any more "volume-related" layoffs, based on a lack of demand, but did not rule out other layoffs having to do with continued restructuring.

The Legislature's Joint Committee on Taxation had scheduled a hearing yesterday, Wednesday, after Townsmen press time, on proposals to modify the rules governing the existing tax break.

Polk said representatives of Raytheon would be there, but did not say what their position would be on the proposals.

Tucker promotes budget with more for old, young

By Neil Fater

It might not mean anything if the House and the governor don't agree, but state Sen. Susan Tucker, D-Andover, is still promoting what she and her senate colleagues have included in their version of the budget.

Andover senior citizens could benefit from a property tax "circuit breaker," says Tucker.

The proposal would allow senior citizens who must spend more than 10 percent of their income on Andover property tax to get a state refund of up to $750.

Seniors would pay their property tax to the town as usual, and receive a refund from the state later.

"The issue is (some seniors) are on a fixed income, and property taxes have been increasing year after year," says Tucker. "The property tax whacks them. They may have bought their house for $30,000 years ago, and now you have to add a zero to that (evaluation)."

Tucker says she doesn't know exactly how many families would be affected, "but I know there are many. I don't know if it's hundreds or thousands," she says. "I have gotten calls from many seniors in Andover who are concerned about their property taxes."

Tucker says the senate budget will also help Andover's youth, both through school and after-school programs.

The senate has included $800,000 more for schools than last year, and $10 million for school nurses.

Tucker says there's also a $12-million appropriation for after-school programs. She says the chances of this money remaining in the final state budget are "pretty good."

"There's a growing understanding that those hours between 2:30 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. are the hours when kids can get into trouble," she says.

scene. McCormick was airlifted to Mass General Hospital, say Salisbury police.

Officers reported heavy damage to both motorcycles and to the Jeep Cherokee, occupied by driver Jolene Grossi and passenger Erin Haley, both of Newburyport. Both Newburyport residents were transported to Anna Jacques Hospital with minor injuries, say police.

Richard Simmons, Salisbury public information officer, says the accident is being investigated by the Salisbury police accident reconstructionist and the Amesbury accident reconstruction team.

Romeo said no arrangements had been made as of press time Wednesday morning.

Accident snarls traffic

A tractor trailer truck from U.S. Waste, a Portland, Connecticut company, overturned on Interstate 495 South Tuesday afternoon, causing major traffic tie-ups throughout town, say police.

Because the accident happened near the interchange with Interstate 93, both commuters on Interstate 495 South and Interstate 93 South experienced highway headaches, say Andover state police.

The accident occurred at 2:30 p.m. and took nearly 12 hours to clean up.

Because of the highway problems, rush-hour commuters flooded Andover streets looking for a different way home.

"From 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. we had people complaining about traffic," says Andover Lieutenant Kevin Winters. "Cars were stopped in intersections. There was gridlock. People were saying there had to be an accident in town because the traffic was stopped."

Winters says the biggest problems were on streets that lead from the highways, including Lowell Street, Shawsheen Road, River Road and Dascomb Road.

"You name it, in Andover and in Tewksbury, every place had major problems," he says.

State Trooper Tornatore is investigating the accident.

Subdivision plan for Lincoln Street area withdrawn for now

By Rebecca Lipchitz

Planning Board members voted unanimously a week ago Tuesday to withdraw without prejudice a plan for Southwick Estates, a proposed subdivision off Lincoln Circle.

Engineer Steve Stapinski, of Merrimack Engineering, says the developer plans to file a new proposal for the same area within the next few months. The definitive subdivision plan and special permit for earth movement were withdrawn without prejudice, giving developer Ray Cormier 90 days to file a new plan without paying another set of filing fees.

In February 1997, planners voted down a preliminary plan for the same site.

Town Planner Paul Materazzo says the two plans are quite different in road alignment, drainage calculations, earth moving and other designs.

While the 1997 plan proposed a seven-lot subdivision off of Shawsheen Road, the new plan, which was withdrawn and is expected to be resubmitted, proposes eight lots off Lincoln Street.

Lincoln Street residents told planners they were concerned about a new development in the area causing flooding and traffic problems in an area heavily traveled by children who live in the area and walk to West Middle School and Andover High School.

The 8.5-acre development would be built in an area that is now wooded, off Lincoln Street and across from Cyr Circle near the intersection of Shawsheen Road.

The lots, which would range from 30,000-68,000 square feet would each have a house of about 4,500 square feet, built off of a new 600-foot street ending in a cul de sac, Stapinski says.

Changes to the plan, if it is resubmitted, would include a name change, Stapinski says, since another development named "Southwick Estates" has been approved by the board for the Stinson Road area.

The development would tie into nearby water and sewer lines, Stapinski says, and widen a short portion of Lincoln Street. The developer also agreed to provide a new eight-inch water main to replace the six-inch water main in the area, Stapinski says.

In addition to residents' traffic and drainage concerns, one resident says he believes the area includes a plan is resubmitted, he would like to discuss the definition with Kick to clarify the meaning of "ice block ridge."

Concerns raised by the town in a May 25 interdepartmental review included post development run-off, regrading, site distances around the curve in Lincoln Street, detention basin discharge onto neighboring property, disturbance of slopes, and the need for traffic controls.

Materazzo says that if the Targeted tax cuts are risky

The gnashing of teeth and political posturing over the announcement this past week of yet more layoffs at Raytheon's Andover plant should provide ample evidence to our political leaders that targeted tax breaks are a risky venture.

The idea, floated in 1995, sounded good at the time. Defense spending was declining. Defense giant Raytheon (which would become much more of a giant in the next several years) needed some incentives to keep its operations — and therefore jobs — in Massachusetts.

So a deal was cut, whereby the company would get a tax break worth about $20 million a year in exchange for a promise to maintain its Massachusetts payroll at 90 percent or more than what it was on Jan. 1, 1996.

The company steadfastly maintains that it has upheld its side of that bargain, although the union representing Raytheon workers contends the company refuses to share financial information that would prove it.

Whether that's true or not, the tax cut has clearly failed to create jobs. Following a string of acquisitions, Raytheon announced it would trim thousands of jobs — about 1,200 in Massachusetts. The union, some legislators and grassroots lobbying groups are now complaining that this violates the spirit, if not the letter, of that agreement.

But, of course, the agreement didn't specify jobs. It specified payroll. And that points to why these things are so risky.

The Legislature never gives anything without strings attached. And if those strings don't do what its members thought they were going to do, they can't resist tinkering with them.

So now we have the spectacle of a state Legislature actually considering a proposal to force the company to keep a certain number of employees, even if it doesn't need them.

That's beyond ridiculous. The Legislature has no business telling a private firm how many employees it has to hire, especially one that has to stay competitive in a global economy.

And the reason such a ridiculous concept is on the table is because of an ill-advised tax cut — a cut that can't be all that significant to a $20-billion company. Far better for the state to cut taxes in general, or structure them in such a way that all kinds of businesses — not just Raytheon — will want to come to Massachusetts, stay here and grow.

Companies add jobs when they can successfully compete. The best thing government can do is stay out of the way and let them do that.

Moving from A to B — type, that is

Perry Colmore

A friend who has serious, ongoing health concerns asked me recently, "How did you go from being a Type A personality to a Type B? How do you slow down your life?"

I really hadn't thought of myself as Type A or B, but yes, I was and still often am an A, a person who is driven, who is constantly looking at "projects" I want to do, a person who has more than she can read by her bedside, a person who keeps lists and sometimes lists of lists and so on.

My Webster's Medical Dictionary defines Type A this way: "Relating to, characteristic of, having, or being a personality that is marked by impatience, aggressiveness and competitiveness and that is held to be associated with increased risk of cardiovascular disease."

Yikes! Cardiovascular disease? Better slow down.

It's interesting that just today I received in the mail a flier about makeup. A large headline asks, "Are you a multi-tasker?" And it explains, "Multi-tasking is the art of doing several things at once. Sound like your life??? (Yes, three question marks; one does not suffice!) Just answer yes, no or maybe so to the following questions."

And it goes on to ask, "If I'm not doing three things at once I feel like I'm wasting time./ I have mastered driving, talking on the cell phone, eating a sandwich, supervising the car pool and singing along with the radio simultaneously."

You get the idea. No wonder we're Type As. No wonder we can't slow down. Even our makeup is designed to be used on the run. There are a bunch of us breast cancer survivors who think stress is related to their disease.

I do, I can't help it, and that's part of the reason I am trying to move more toward the Type B personality: "Relating to, characteristic of, having, or being a personality that is marked by a lack of excessive aggressiveness and tension and that is held to be associated with reduced risk of cardiovascular disease."

Of course being a Type A isn't all bad. I've always loved to win at sports — tennis and swimming, and I've always wanted to win board games. And I'm sure part of the reason I was able to put together a newspaper as an editor is that I'm primarily a Type A personality.

One of my friends who also has had breast cancer is more driven than I. She wants to grab at every project that comes her way, and she has goals that just won't quit. Recently, she has had serious heart problems that may be related to part of her chemotherapy regimen that I'm sure helped kill off her breast cancer.

Now this woman's cardiologist is telling her to go home, to slow down, even to quit working! That's like telling a swimmer she's allergic to chlorine and she's not to go swimming. Impossible. Another breast cancer friend is working on slowing down her life. She's been a workaholic, and although she seems to have beaten breast cancer, she's kicking up other health problems. She, too, has been told she would be wise to slow it down.

One clever thing she's decided to do is not to work more than two days in a row. So she's taking Wednesdays off, she works Monday and Tuesday, and she works Thursday and Friday. And now she's not allowing herself to work on the weekends, which she used to do on a regular basis.

This woman and I are a bit older than the first friend I mentioned. I think it's easier for an older Type A to move toward being a Type B than a younger person.

A third friend who finished treatment for breast cancer about a year ago is looking at her diet to help her change her sometimes disjointed lifestyle. She is eating more protein and less carbohydrates and she says she has more energy. I, too, am working on that premise, that carbohydrates turn to sugar and

Those who sacrificed deserve military salute

Editor, Townsmen:

Having read Mrs. Wilson's letter about her experience at the Memorial Day parade ("Parade shattered by gun shots," Townsmen, June 10), I only think it is fitting to remind her what Memorial Day is about.

Memorial Day is a solemn occasion. While many families gather to remember loved ones who have passed away and to visit their graves, there is a larger meaning. Memorial Day is when we honor those who, as Lincoln said, gave "the last full measure" in the service of their country.

Those men who fell in such places as Bunker Hill, Bull Run, Belleau Wood, Iwo Jima, Inchon, and the La Drang Valley are all deserving of honors from those they protected so selflessly.

If Mrs. Wilson thinks that it is inappropriate that the price these men paid in blood has not earned them that privilege, then perhaps she should reflect on what their sacrifices have meant not only for her, but for her children and grandchildren.

A military salute to these heroes is certainly not to be denied because it disturbs Mrs. Wilson's peaceful morning. Because of these people, Mrs. Wilson, we are able to have many such peaceful mornings.

Dance instructor is good role model

Editor, Townsmen:

It is not often that one gets to take note of a dance instructor for being such a wonderful role model for children. Many times parents just drop off their children and pick them up after classes without ever realizing how much a dance instructor can influence the lives of their children.

Our 12-year-old daughter had attended a dance studio in Tewksbury for nine years, taking four to five classes a week. She was part of a very accomplished

Grad got lost in shuffle

Editor, Townsmen:

As my senior year wound down to a close, celebration over graduation within the class overwhelmed everyone. Senior week was diligently being planned and diplomas signed, but somehow two graduates were getting lost in the shuffle; I was one of them. Kids would ask me when I ran into them uptown, "Liz, where were you when we took the class picture — aren't you graduating?"

As a student enrolled at the Andover/North Andover Alternative High School, located at North Andover High, I was deprived of all of my senior activities, including acknowledgement in the yearbook. For those unfamiliar with the Alternative School, it is a program developed by AHS and NAHS that allows students to go to school at night and work during the day for academic credit, eventually earning a diploma from their sending school.

Some people look at it as an easy way out. On the contrary, I found it difficult and very challenging to balance my employment and my studies. Learning with kids, who work anywhere from 20 to 40 hours a week on top of school, I found out the true meaning of work ethic and support.

However, I am disappointed to report, my sending school (Andover High School) was anything but supportive. Once I had officially enrolled at the night school, I was told that I was trespassing if I went to AHS during the day, even if I needed to use the library. As the holidays passed, I found out that I was one credit short of graduating. So, I enrolled at NECCO and took an English composition course on top of my workload to ensure graduation. I'm not one to boast, but I worked harder than ever and I think I deserved my diploma just as much as the honor roll students at the day school.

Senior week rolled around and I wasn't included. I was never offered it, so I missed all of the deadlines for the dues. Also, when yearbooks were passed out, the money I spent last summer getting senior pictures taken went right down the drain; as I was not even named as a graduate, let alone pictured, even though I made a point to hand in all my paperwork in on time. My phone calls to administration were ignored and passed to my guidance counselor to answer.

I guess the point that I am trying to make is that if I am going to receive an AHS diploma, I should not be considered or treated like a second-class student. Maybe it was miscommunication, but it didn't just happen to me. The other person graduating from the Alternative School this year was also not listed. There needs to be more interaction between both schools, so as not to alienate students from their sending schools. There also needs to be more support from the administration and counselors at AHS.

I hope that this letter will call this to the attention of the school committee so that something can be done for my friends at the Alternative High School who are graduating in the class of 2000. Finally, thank you to the Andover Townsman for printing my name in the paper as a 1999 AHS graduate; that's more than I can say for Andover High School.

competitive dance team. Despite the accomplishments, we could see our daughter changing for the worse. She became shy and went from loving dance to being afraid to go to class. She went from being a confident child to a child with very low self-esteem. She was part of an activity that as parents, we thought would improve her self esteem. We never knew how wrong we would be.

We finally became aware that her dance instructor cared much more about winning competitions than the wellness of our child. Our daughter made the very difficult decision to quit dance. She felt her dreams were shattered.

Then we found Cindi Morgan, the owner and director of Dance Infusion of Andover. We told her of the mental abuse our daughter suffered at the hands of the previous dance instructor. Cindi took our daughter in halfway through the year. Our daughter proudly danced in five numbers in the first recital for Dance Infusion and was an assistant instructor for several classes. Today she continues as an assistant instructor under Cindi's direction. She has learned that dance is an art and trophies are not as important as she once thought.

As we near the second annual recital of Dance Infusion, we would like to acknowledge Cindi Morgan for giving our daughter back her self esteem and confidence and allowing her to live her dream.

We agree with the philosophy on her wall:

"A hundred years from now it will not matter what my bank account was, the sort of house I lived in or the kind of car I drove;

"But that the world may be different because I was important in the life of a child."

Cindi was and is very important to our two children and all the children who pass through her doors.

Firearms are fitting Memorial tribute

Editor, Townsmen:

This letter is in response to the lady who was upset that there were guns in the Memorial Day Parade.

Memorial Day is a day set aside to honor and remember those who have died while serving our country in time of war. The fitting tribute is a honor guard salute with firearms. We should never forget our fallen military.

As for teaching our children that guns are not our friends, our children should be taught that firearms should not be touched unless there is an adult present. They should also be told why there are firearms in parades, and not to be upset.

that we need more protein to work efficiently. Now I am not falling asleep when I'm reading or even working in the afternoon.

I left my job as editor of the Townsmen a year and a half ago because I had other writing projects I wanted to pursue, and also because I thought it would be wise to have a less stressful job.

Now, with volunteering at a hospital one day a week, I'm working full time. But I rarely work on the weekends, and I've been known to clear a whole week, go to the seashore and read, sleep and walk. For an entire week! I used to call that "doing nothing." Now I call it slowing down, even saving my life.

Here are some other ways I've learned to chill out:

- Listening to music. Try it. Just music. Nothing else, no reading, no writing. Just music.

- Visits with my daughter. I think while I was a newspaper editor she felt I didn't have enough time for her. Now I plan more time to be alone with her. Recently we went to the Mary Cassatt exhibit at the Museum of Fine Arts and then had lunch at the museum. It was a wonderfully relaxing day.

- When at all possible, I am with my son-in-law, too, but he works for a newspaper and he's pretty busy. Still, I think he's smarter than I sometimes was. I think he takes more "personal" time than I thought I had time for.

- Time with my son. We are online together most days, and since he lives very near me, he and his girlfriend spend time with my husband and me. Just the four of us. It's wonderful to eat together. I find sitting at the table for a few hours with them tremendously satisfying.

- Reading. Many days I work only until 4 p.m. and then I sit down for an hour and a half and read. As soon as I "retired" — what we at first called leaving the newspaper — I'd spend an hour and a half reading the morning newspaper. But that passed after a month or two and I began to take on projects. Still, I almost always was in a book, and loving being "away," somewhere else but in my busy life. The minute I'd finish one book, I'd pick up a new one.

- I remember that when I was a newspaper editor I'd only read a novel when I was on vacation. I didn't have time for more than newspapers, magazines and other periodicals. Or that's what I thought. Twice, since I've been "retired," I got off the Type B track and stopped reading books. "Too much to do, so much to write, so many interviews to do," would be my excuse.

Also, when yearbooks were passed out, the money I spent last summer getting senior pictures taken went right down the drain; as I was not even named as a graduate, let alone pictured, even though I made a point to hand in all my paperwork in on time. My phone calls to administration were ignored and passed to my guidance counselor to answer.

I guess the point that I am trying to make is that if I am going to receive an AHS diploma, I should not be considered or treated like a second-class student. Maybe it was miscommunication, but it didn't just happen to me. The other person graduating from the Alternative School this year was also not listed. There needs to be more interaction between both schools, so as not to alienate students from their sending schools. There also needs to be more support from the administration and counselors at AHS.

I hope that this letter will call this to the attention of the school committee so that something can be done for my friends at the Alternative High School who are graduating in the class of 2000. Finally, thank you to the Andover Townsman for printing my name in the paper as a 1999 AHS graduate; that's more than I can say for Andover High School.

competitive dance team. Despite the accomplishments, we could see our daughter changing for the worse. She became shy and went from loving dance to being afraid to go to class. She went from being a confident child to a child with very low self-esteem. She was part of an activity that as parents, we thought would improve her self esteem. We never knew how wrong we would be.

We finally became aware that her dance instructor cared much more about winning competitions than the wellness of our child. Our daughter made the very difficult decision to quit dance. She felt her dreams were shattered.

Then we found Cindi Morgan, the owner and director of Dance Infusion of Andover. We told her of the mental abuse our daughter suffered at the hands of the previous dance instructor. Cindi took our daughter in halfway through the year. Our daughter proudly danced in five numbers in the first recital for Dance Infusion and was an assistant instructor for several classes. Today she continues as an assistant instructor under Cindi's direction. She has learned that dance is an art and trophies are not as important as she once thought.

As we near the second annual recital of Dance Infusion, we would like to acknowledge Cindi Morgan for giving our daughter back her self esteem and confidence and allowing her to live her dream.

We agree with the philosophy on her wall:

"A hundred years from now it will not matter what my bank account was, the sort of house I lived in or the kind of car I drove;

"But that the world may be different because I was important in the life of a child."

Cindi was and is very important to our two children and all the children who pass through her doors.

Firearms are fitting Memorial tribute

Editor, Townsmen:

This letter is in response to the lady who was upset that there were guns in the Memorial Day Parade.

Memorial Day is a day set aside to honor and remember those who have died while serving our country in time of war. The fitting tribute is a honor guard salute with firearms. We should never forget our fallen military.

As for teaching our children that guns are not our friends, our children should be taught that firearms should not be touched unless there is an adult present. They should also be told why there are firearms in parades, and not to be upset.

Type A ...

that we need more protein to work efficiently. Now I am not falling asleep when I'm reading or even working in the afternoon.

I left my job as editor of the Townsmen a year and a half ago because I had other writing projects I wanted to pursue, and also because I thought it would be wise to have a less stressful job.

Now, with volunteering at a hospital one day a week, I'm working full time. But I rarely work on the weekends, and I've been known to clear a whole week, go to the seashore and read, sleep and walk. For an entire week! I used to call that "doing nothing." Now I call it slowing down, even saving my life.

Here are some other ways I've learned to chill out:

- Listening to music. Try it. Just music. Nothing else, no reading, no writing. Just music.

- Visits with my daughter. I think while I was a newspaper editor she felt I didn't have enough time for her. Now I plan more time to be alone with her. Recently we went to the Mary Cassatt exhibit at the Museum of Fine Arts and then had lunch at the museum. It was a wonderfully relaxing day.

When at all possible, I am with my son-in-law, too, but he works for a newspaper and he's pretty busy. Still, I think he's smarter than I sometimes was. I think he takes more "personal" time than I thought I had time for.

- Time with my son. We are online together most days, and since he lives very near me, he and his girlfriend spend time with my husband and me. Just the four of us. It's wonderful to eat together. I find sitting at the table for a few hours with them tremendously satisfying.

- Reading. Many days I work only until 4 p.m. and then I sit down for an hour and a half and read. As soon as I "retired" — what we at first called leaving the newspaper — I'd spend an hour and a half reading the morning newspaper. But that passed after a month or two and I began to take on projects. Still, I almost always was in a book, and loving being "away," somewhere else but in my busy life. The minute I'd finish one book, I'd pick up a new one.

I remember that when I was a newspaper editor I'd only read a novel when I was on vacation. I didn't have time for more than newspapers, magazines and other periodicals. Or that's what I thought. Twice, since I've been "retired," I got off the Type B track and stopped reading books. "Too much to do, so much to write, so many interviews to do," would be my excuse.

Only this time I was onto myself. My Type A was creeping back in. The first time I realized I was no longer reading books, I took a week off from my projects, went to the beach and read a whole book the first day. I jump-started my reading, my slowing down. And that's what I did the second time I got too busy to read and I hope I'll continue to remember to take time off when I get "too busy."

• Going to church and praying. I'm singing in the choir at a church in Boston and my husband and I are taking a rewarding course one night a week for 17 weeks at the church, which is growing me tremendously. I find my time at church and in prayer a wonderful way to slow down my life and to refocus on the important things in life.

• E-mail. Yes, I kid you not, being in touch with friends and colleagues by e-mail is a good way for me to slow down. I can make the choice when and if I "talk" with someone and when I'm writing online, it is "one-way talking," just me, and there is less stimulation in this "conversation." It works for me.

• Stretching and breathing. My husband and I took a few Chi (energy) Kung (study) lessons from a calming and centered man named Ramel Rones, a mind/body expert who teaches Chi Kung, Tai Chi and Kung Fu. A Boston oncologist, Charles Shapiro, has said, "The practice of Chi Kung helps individuals diagnosed with cancer and other life-threatening illnesses ease some of the side effects of treatment on a physical, mental and spiritual level."

So even sitting in traffic I sometimes remember to breathe in deep breaths, to fill my lungs and let my shoulders down. And often in the morning I will stretch out, hoping my body will be able to keep up with my plans for the day.

• Swimming. I am out of the pool lately, having had a cold and just getting out of this habit, but it's a good one to slow down a person's life, soothing and meditative.

• Meditation and visualizations. Yes, you can do it, even if you think you can't. People say, "But all those thoughts come into my head." Fine, say hello to the thoughts and then get back to that safe, comfortable place and be there, soothe yourself and be there, out of the rush of the day.

• Walking. Recently, it's been on a treadmill, but it's just about time to go outdoors. And get this, my husband and I are getting a puppy at the end of May. Now that may not help slow down my life, but it will get me outdoors more often and it will bring even more love into my life.

It's easier to slow down if you're older and no longer have children at home. And having some traits of a Type A personality is useful, it helps us accomplish what we set out to do. But if you can't stand to have another car in front of you in traffic, if you spend the whole weekend working on your job, if you can't remember your kids' friends' names, then it might be time to work some slowing-down techniques into your day. I recommend it.

Kamm vacates restraining order vs. accused husband

Dr. Suzan Kamm has requested, and a Lawrence District Court judge has allowed, the removal of a restraining order against her husband, Dr. James P. Kartell, 60, that had barred him from their home at 29 Brady Loop, Andover.

Kartell faces murder charges for allegedly shooting his wife's fiancé, Janos Vajda, to death on Feb. 23, when both men were in Suzan Kamm's hospital room at Holy Family Hospital in Methuen, where she was being treated for pneumonia.

Kartell has been free on $200,000 bail since he was arraigned.

Kamm had sought the restraining order days after the shooting, saying she was "terrified" of her husband.

But even though Judge William Melahn told her she could maintain the portion of the order that forbids Kartell from abusing or threatening her, Kamm said she wanted the order vacated "in full."

Another restraining order, brought by Kartell's former girlfriend, Barbara Carroll of Lexington, remains in effect.

Kartell is due next in court on June 29. His trial is expected to begin in the fall.

One last party for the AHS Class of '99

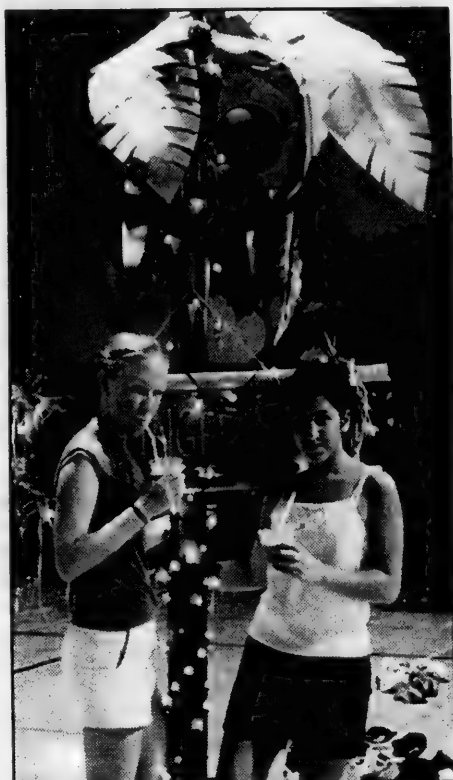

By Lisa Kletjian

Andover High Class of '99

After a long graduation ceremony in stifling heat magnified by heavy graduation gowns, the seniors of the Class of 1999 were ready to release a bit of tension. The place where most of them did this was Senior Safari, an annual all-night fest with enough activities to keep more than 300 seniors as busy as a swarm of mosquitoes released into a crowd of people on a hot, muggy day.

The safari is held at the Andover High School gym, which is colorfully transformed into a rainforest. This chemical-free event continues to remain successful after seven years, and has proved itself once again to be an ideal way for the seniors to kick back and have fun after graduation without the use of alcohol or drugs.

The safari, which lasts from 10 p.m. to 5 a.m., kept the seniors active through its many activities and events. There was an enormous inflated air mattress in the shape of a tiger (for jumping on and bouncing around), a bungee run, an American Gladiator-style jousting area, a hypnotist, spiritual and palm readings, a handwriting analyst, hairstylists, caricature artists, manicures, a massage therapist, a faketattoo parlor, music accompanied by a screen displaying the video of each song, swing-dancing, keychains with photos of friends inside, arcade games, ping-pong, yearbook-signing, and T-shirts with the Senior Safari logo on them. Fortunately, when the seniors got hungry, they didn't have to hunt for their food. There was a variety of choices, including pizza, Chinese food, (virgin) strawberry daiquiris, coffee and bagels in the morning, and much more. The culinary highlight was a beautifully frosted cake in the design of a jungle and an explorer.

One particular activity that had the seniors howling with laughter was the hypnotism of their classmates. The hypnotist was able to put 11 people under his spell, and had them doing everything from desperately licking a melting ice cream cone to pretending they were in Riverdance. They dramatically portrayed bodybuilders, air guitarists, moviegoers watching sad, funny, and scary films, and other roles that kept the seniors entertained.

Seniors found the spiritual readings, palm readings, and handwriting analysts to be intriguing as well. A lot of skeptics were dumbfounded by the accuracy of the readings, and how much the psychics or analyst could reveal about each person's character

New beginning, ideas, values, and a new millennium

By Laurie Willey

Andover High Class of '99

Our class marks the end of the second millennium, a vibrant signal for a new beginning. As the class of 1999, let us take a moment to thank all the parents and guardians who have supported us through the years and have come here today to watch our class graduate. Let us also thank the faculty and administration for their encouragement and help throughout the last four years.

Less than a year ago, our class stepped into the newly renovated, sparkling Andover High School for our final 180 days. Each day we counted down the minutes, impatiently awaiting the end. But today as our wish comes true, we recognize that this moment we had hoped for, for so long, contains some concern and sadness as opposed to the complete happiness we once envisioned.

Perhaps we shouldn't have been so anxious to leave, we should have cherished every last second, rather than wish most of them away. Look around, these are the people with whom you have spent the last four, 12, and in some cases 18 years of your life.

We built friendships together, expanded our knowledge with each other, experimented with new trends, and most importantly formed lasting memories with one another. But now we are faced with the realization that we must move on with our lives. We must face the oncoming challenges of the real world. Every end brings a new beginning.

We look to the future with wonder and hesitation; we are about to start a completely new chapter in our book of life. Our school days are over, we are growing up, and we have to face the real world as individuals, on our own, with no one holding our hand at every crossroad. When we step out of this room tonight, there is no guarantee we will see even half of the people with whom we have built relationships. So many times we hear people say friendships last forever, but things change and people change. With all our new friends, teachers, experiences, and separation: whether it be by a hallway or the Mason-Dixon line, the test of friendship is about to begin. With this thought in mind, take the first step into your new beginning, remembering the end you have left behind.

Recall the regrets you have had and be sure in this new chapter you are about to begin, you do not repeat the same mistakes. Speaking through experience Mark Twain reflects: "Ten years from now you'll be more disappointed by the things you didn't do than by the things you did do. So throw off the bowlines and sail away from the safe harbor. Explore, dream, discover."

As much as I would love to tell you that our future filled with exploration, discovery, and dreaming only holds accomplishment and greatness, I honestly cannot. As your classmate, I cannot offer you all the answers. I have only as much wisdom as any one of you sitting here today. Just as many of you are, I am unsure whether I have chosen the right university or career path for myself. Some of us are going off to programs like City Year and the military, while others are going to college, work, or other career opportunities. The choices we have made during the past several months are those we must live with for the next several years of our lives. Perhaps you didn't choose the right path or school. Maybe choosing the college route wasn't right to begin with. There are no guarantees, or any way of knowing for that matter, there never is, it's simply a part of life we have to face with courage and faith. For all we know, the dreams we've held close to our hearts since we were little children may be the exact opposite of what happens in reality. Nonetheless, we have grown enough to recognize the difference between reality and fantasy. We have the experience to know which dreams to chase and which ones to let go.

I mean, come on - who doesn't want to marry Ben Affleck, or have a fling with Jennifer Love Hewitt? Regardless, down the road if you realize you've chosen the wrong direction, don't lose hope. You aren't the only person struggling, and you certainly are not the only one who made a mistake. The important thing is to learn from your mistakes. Before deciding your plans for next year, did you consider everything? Were the pros and cons weighed? Were you even sober? Or was it simply a case of immaturity and lack of experience? No matter the reason, keep in mind mistakes are a never-ending cycle and remember Vas Lerman's advice, not only to wear sunscreen, but also "Do not compliment yourself too much or berate yourself either. Our choices are half chance, and so are everyone else's."

In addition, realize that it does not matter what university you go to or what program you enroll in, no one will ever teach you how to grow up, cope with heartbreak, struggle with death, or deal with loss.

There is no Parenting 101 class in your course catalogue, and without a rulebook to follow you can't expect to be perfect your first round through.

Rather, life's golden rules are learned through our own experiences. Perhaps that is why when your father sits you down and starts rambling off his advice, reflecting back to his childhood when he walked to and from school - uphill both ways - you do

PIKE SCHOOL HOLDS CLOSING EXERCISES

Photos by Lisa Adelsberger

Fifty-five students graduated from the Pike School on Wednesday, June 9, including ninth-graders in the Class of 1999 and eighth-graders in the Class of 2000. Above, the graduates applaud their parents for a "job well done."

Presenting the Pike graduates ...

This year's speaker was Morgen Peck, who graduated earlier this month from St. Paul's School in Concord, N.H. She was introduced by Judith Elefante (right), ninth grade team leader.

Dr. Michael J. Terlizzi is the new chairman of the board of trustees.

Head of School John (Muddy) Waters awarded diplomas to eighth- and ninth-graders. On the platform to represent Pike's trustees was Dr. Michael J. Terlizzi (left), the new chairman of this board. On the right is Michael Munhall, head of the Upper School.

55 Pike eighth- and ninth-graders awarded diplomas

Fifty-five students graduated from the Pike School on Wednesday, June 9, in Harding Gymnasium. Head of School John M. Waters awarded the diplomas to eighth- and ninth-graders. On the platform to represent Pike's trustees was Dr. Michael J. Terlizzi, the new chairman of this board.

It is the custom at Pike for a member of the class that graduated four years ago to give the commencement address. This year's speaker was Morgen Peck, who graduated earlier this month from St. Paul's School in Concord, N.H. She will enter Harvard in the fall. Peck is the daughter of Kathleen Peck of Newbury.

Awards were presented to the outstanding graduates. Among students recognized for their achievements was Alexandra Garrison of Derry, N.H., winner of the Head of School Award for leadership as well as high standards of scholarship. Anne Snyder of Andover received the Margaret J. Little Award for spirit, including integrity, generosity and thoughtfulness. The Alumni Prize, recognizing academic improvement, responsibility and friendliness, was awarded to Christopher Straub of Windham, N.H. Douglas Johnson of Andover received the Nicolas Grieco Prize for academic improvement, personal growth and a positive influence on fellow students.

Early detection of Alzheimer's is important because, for most people, new Alzheimer's medicines work to temporarily halt or slow down the symptom progression.

Alzheimer's Facts:

The American Alzheimer's Association, in conjunction with the Ronald Reagan Foundation just released reasons why early detection of the disease is crucial:

- Some causes of memory loss are reversible if caught early.
- There is a greater chance of benefiting from existing and experimental medications.
- There is more time to plan for the future and make decisions critical to one's own care.
- Diagnosis often resolves the anxiety of wondering, "what's wrong with me?"

Currently there is no blood test or brain imaging device that can distinguish the earliest signs of Alzheimer's from the normal aging process. Detailed neuropsychological evaluation is the best tool for determining the presence of degenerative memory changes in their earliest stages.

The Memory Disorders Clinic at the Northeast Rehabilitation Health Network provides neuropsychological and neurological testing to assist in the early detection of Alzheimer's disease. For more information or to schedule an appointment call:

not completely understand what he is getting at. But when the day comes that you experience what he had spent two hours talking about, you realize just how good his advice really was. Growing up is a learning process, and if a multimillion-dollar baseball player can have three strikes in one inning, we are at least entitled to a hundred mistakes in a lifetime. Wisdom comes with time. We will gain strength through the obstacles we overcome and confidence with the hard decisions we make.

Oasis sings "I need more time to make things right," but honestly, sometimes there isn't more time. Ask a mother of a premature baby the value of one month; or ask a daily labor worker who has 10 kids to feed, the value of one day. Then, only then, we may be able to place in perspective how important it is to treasure each moment since time waits for no one.

The future may have moments of pain and disappointment, but it will also be filled with promise. Things will happen that we never dreamed possible.

Expect the unexpected. There was a time no one sitting here today ever thought it was possible for two 17-year-old high school students to kill one, let alone 13, of their classmates.

There was also a time the Oval Office was a sacred place, where only the most important business of the nation took place. But that has all changed now and this end is bringing a new beginning, new ideas, new values, and a new millennium.

Our sheltered life in a small, safe town will all change now. Our protection from violence and hardships is over. Reality is setting in, so please take this last moment to recall the Pleasantville life with which we've grown up; Sesame Street, the Brady Bunch, and The Wonder Years.

Take Kevin Arnold's advice and start your new beginning. "The future is calling us and, no matter what, there's no turning back now."

For close to 50 years, we've been attracting a small crowd.

Is it our exceptional doctors? Or our luxurious suites? Or our latest delivery and care options? Whatever the reason, if you're expecting, we have the perfect formula for your newborn at The Birthing Center at Holy Family Hospital. Consensus difficult on vision for Main Street

By Taylor Armerding

Downtown business owners and their employees who have become accustomed to leaving their cars parked all day on Main Street might want to adjust their plans.

And bicycle riders who now have a tough time navigating Main Street might be getting their own travel lane, thanks to the state.

Those were the two major changes that came out of the Planning Board's second public hearing of the year on downtown improvements, held Tuesday night at Memorial Hall Library.

Regarding parking, in response to several suggestions from residents, Selectman Lori Becker said she would consult with police and propose to the rest of the board a cut in the allowed parking time on Main Street from the current two hours to a range of 15 minutes to a half hour.

About 25 people who attended the hearing appeared to agree that such a change would be good for local business because it would more shoppers to come downtown, and also reduce traffic, by cutting down on the number of times drivers circle through the area looking for a place to park.

The news for bikers came from Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, who announced early in the meeting that the town's proposed Main Street Improvement project design, submitted to the Massachusetts Highway Department seeking a $2.6-million grant last winter, has been at least temporarily rejected, according to Stapczynski, because it didn't include a bicycle lane.

The town had applied for a waiver from that requirement, arguing that Main Street is not the place to encourage bicycle traffic.

But, "It appears that all projects are going to have to pass an 'inter-modal transportation' test," he said, "and they are not going to grant the waivers we requested."

That wasn't all bad news to everybody in an audience of about 25 who turned out for the hearing.

More than one citizen called for incentives for bicycles, including special travel lanes and bike racks, as a way to cut down on the number of cars coming through the downtown.

But besides those issues, there was little broad consensus about how to deal with the two major topics of discussion Tuesday night — parking problems and conflicts between pedestrians and auto traffic.

Most suggestions to solve one problem were met with objections that solving the problem would simply create another.

At one point, Planning Board Chairman Michael Miller warned the group that "if we're not all willing to give a little, we won't get anything accomplished."

One resident said one way to cut down on the number of cars coming to the downtown would be to simply make it safer. "I've spoken to elderly people in my neighborhood," she said, "and none of them walk downtown because they don't feel safe enough to even cross the street. They all drive."

But others worried that if traffic is slowed too much on Main Street, drivers would simply spill over onto side streets, seeking short cuts.

"I don't need that," said a resident of

The Main thing — It is tough to juggle competing interests in the town's Central Business District.

Bartlet Street.

And another warned that making drivers "crawl" down Main Street would be bad for business, because people would try to avoid it at all costs.

Denis Ryan, of Chestnut Street, head of the Downtown Andover Neighborhood Association (DANA) suggested that the planners follow through on a suggestion made about a year ago, to hire a traffic consultant.

When it came to parking, there was an equally diverse range of opinion. Police parking officer David Cantone said he thought there were enough parking spaces in and around the downtown, but that Main Street is clogged because people refuse to park on available side streets and walk for a minute or two to their destination, insisting on parking "right in front" of where they want to go. He also said employees of downtown businesses tend to monopolize spaces, parking in them all day, even when they get tickets.

Some, he said, allow their tickets to accumulate to $600 or $700, and pay them only when their car is towed.

There were some suggestions that parking ticket fines be increased from their current $10, and others that police should double- or triple-ticket cars that sit in the same spot all day. Currently, police issue only one ticket to a car per day, no matter how long it stays in the same space.

But Cantone's suggestion to provide incentives for people to park on neighborhood streets prompted objections from Abigail O'Hara, of Chestnut Street, also a DANA member, who complained that residents of the downtown area get nothing in return for losing the right to park in front of their own homes. "We don't get trees, we don't get sidewalks — we get nothing," she said, adding that it is frustrating for people who need the spaces in front of their homes for visits from repair people, moving vans or mothers coming to drop off their Brownies for a troop meeting.

"I'm not saying we don't have to share," she said. "But I don't think a business problem should be pushed into the neighborhoods."

Paint plant ...

Products President Joseph Junkin wants to move his Cambridge-based company to a site off Dascomb Road, near the Tewksbury line. California Products makes latex paints and some other products, such as the surface used on the refurbished Andover High School track.

Selectmen delayed their vote on the license last week, after a standing-room-only crowd expressed concern about the environmental dangers posed by the paint plant.

Residents noted that Wilmington denied the company's request to relocate there, and two-fifths of the Tewksbury selectmen opposed the company relocating to Dascomb Road. They said they were concerned about xylene and other chemicals used or discharged into the air, and about increased traffic that would be caused by California Products 115 employees, along with trucks carrying company products.

California products says the amount of fumes released by the company are equal to one house being painted per day.

But because of residents' concerns, selectmen asked the company to provide Material Safety Data Sheets on the materials they will use and store at the plant.

This week, Wright and Health Director Everett Penney say they perused the data sheets, which are available now to the public.

Residents can view the sheets in the Community Development and Planning department, on the bottom floor of Town Offices. They may also pay to have copies of the sheets, but there are several hundred sheets and the town charges residents 25 cents per page to make copies of public documents.

In reviewing the MSDS, Penney says he "found nothing that was of particular concern from a public health point of view," assuming the chemicals are used properly.

"But outside, if there's a spill, that's a little different exposure," he says.

At last week's meeting, California Products' officials emphasized that their plant would be built to make such a spill or leak impossible, and pointed to their record in Cambridge over the past 70 years. The company has operated in a residential area during that time.

"This company is certainly safer than some of your electronic companies that deal with manufacturing circuit boards," says Wright. "This would certainly be in the lower 25 percent of Andover companies (in terms of the danger they pose)."

Product review

Wright reports that California Products uses 249 products requiring an MSDS.

"Everything comes with these sheets now," says

Wright. "When I buy glass cleaner for the station I get an MSDS sheet. When I buy toilet bowl cleaner I get an MSDS sheet with it."

The data sheets rank chemicals on a scale of 1 to 4, with 4 being the most hazardous to public health. California Products does not use a chemical with a 4 ranking, says Penney.

"(The sheets for California Products) show that they have chemicals that many other companies have in Andover. There's nothing unusual that we haven't seen before," says Penney.

However, Penney cautions that an MSDS is limited in scope, and does not address long-term effects of exposure or specifically describe in what concentrations the chemical will be used at the site.

"An MSDS isn't meant to tell you anything you need to know about the chemical. It's for emergency response," says Penney.

"I'm going to be writing up a recommendation to the town manager and to the Board of Selectmen relative to the precaution for storage and particular use," he says.

But both Penney and Wright say they've toured California Products current site, along with selectmen, talked with Cambridge residents and officials, and found no problem with the company.

Wright says he believes some of the opposition to California Products comes from people who simply don't want any more industry in Andover.

Tucker tries again to save handicapped day program

By Taylor Armerding

State Sen. Sue Tucker, D-Andover, has launched a new effort to preserve the Developmental Day Program at the Professional Center for the Handicapped in Andover.

The program, which serves about 27 severely handicapped children from birth to age 3, was informed by the state Department of Public Health late this past winter that its funding would be cut from about $110,000 to about $50,000, and that those children would have to be moved into a more mainstream, or "natural" environment, based on new language in federal guidelines for handicapped children.

At the time, then-DPH spokesman Mark Lescasse said the new federal guidelines simply mirrored those in public school special education — putting handicapped children in regular classrooms rather than segregating them.

But Veryl Anderson, co-director of the Professional Center, called the decision a disaster for both children and parents. These children, she said, were too severely handicapped to be placed with other toddlers who are not disabled.

Tucker, a former board member of the Center, called it a case of "bureaucracy run amok."

The initial ruling, which would have closed the program by the end of this month, was delayed for a year, to June 2000. But Tucker says she hopes her new strategy will delay it indefinitely.

An amendment she filed this past week would require the DPH to provide a written service plan for each child to the Senate Committee on Ways and Means, demonstrating that closing the day program would not harm the children.

"They have been telling us that the money will follow the child — that the child won't lose services," Tucker says, "but I'm profoundly skeptical of that. (Regular) day care centers are not equipped to serve these kids. And there are no other support groups for parents, who need that right from the moment of birth (of the children)."

If DPH cannot provide a written plan by this coming January, she says, then her proposed amendment would forbid the agency from phasing out the Andover program or four other similar regional centers across the state.

Tucker says she has another piece of ammunition, in the form of a letter from Thomas Hehir, the director of the Office of Special Education in the U.S. Department of Education, to Congressman Marty Meehan.

"He says Massachusetts will not lose money or be penalized for keeping this program, and that there is more than one definition of a natural environment, based on the needs of the child," Tucker says.

In that letter, dated June 11, Hehir indeed says "... a natural environment for one child may not be a natural environment for another child."

But he also says that Massachusetts still has to "... ensure that early intervention services are provided consistent with Part C ..." to avoid the termination of funding.

And it is the language of Part C that is the sticking point. So far, the state has interpreted that to mean a less "segregated" environment for the children now in the day program.

Chris Fay, spokesman for the DPH, said the department would not object to providing service plans for the children, as long as doing so to members Ways and Means would not violate confidentiality issues regarding the children.

Finegold: Let towns reissue licenses

By Neil Fater

State Rep. Barry Finegold, D-Andover, is hoping that one way to cut those long lines at the Lawrence Registry office might be to send some of the people in line back to their communities.

Finegold suggests towns and cities should be given the opportunity to reissue driver's licenses to people who live in their town.

He sent a letter to Governor Paul Cellucci asking the governor to include this topic in a meeting held with state Sen. Susan Tucker, D-Andover, state Reps. Jose Santiago, D-Lawrence, and Dave Torrissi, D-North Andover, Cellucci, and Registry officials yesterday afternoon after the Townsmen went to press.

"Even if they do put in a superstore in Lawrence, we still would like the opportunity to have, say, the town clerk or another department reissue driver's licenses," says Finegold. "I've never waiting in line at the town clerk's office, or any town office, and I think this would relieve aggravation."

Finegold says it's unreasonable for senior citizens to have to wait as long as two hours just to have their license renewed.

He believes towns can do a better job with this task because their is more accountability.

"Imagine what would happen to the town manager or selectmen if someone had to wait two hours in line. It just doesn't happen," he says.

Finegold says the idea came from Andover Town Moderator Jim Doherty, who floated it at a Kiwanis luncheon.

mittee will have seven members who will help oversee the school construction project planned on Cross Street and High Plain Road.

Andover's last building committee was able to get residents to approve $38.5 million for work at Andover High and South and Sanborn elementary schools. Committee members seemed to work well together, and also successfully convinced residents to approve more construction money two separate times when the High School project had severe problems.

But the project finished millions of dollars over budget and years behind schedule. The town is still discussing legal issues with the architect out of court.

One difference with the new project, however, is that Andover has hired David Harding to serve as a construction project manager since the embryonic stage of the new school building project.

The new building committee will also have a different structure because of an article approved at Town Meeting a few years ago, says Stapczynski.

Because the School Committee felt it should be more "in the loop" regarding school building projects, residents approved an article that calls for a School Committee member and a school administrator to be on the new building committee. Tina Girdwood and Superintendent Claudia Bach have volunteered to be on the committee, and Stapczynski will select the other five members.

Stapczynski has a volunteer list of 14 people from which to choose.

He says he wants people who can cut through bureaucracy to get the project built.

"The first criteria is having uncommon common sense," he says.

Stapczynski says other criteria he will use to select the committee includes finding:

- people who have the time to give to the lengthy and consuming project;
- a mix of residents, including people from different areas of town and different stages of life;
- people who can work together and listen to the community; and
- a group with a wide range of work experience.

"I've got some people I think will be a good mix, but I want to meet with Claudia after (Tuesday's) meeting," says Stapczynski.

Architect selected

Stapczynski and a design selection team have already chosen the architect who will design the preliminary plans. The company is Symmes, Maini & McKee Associates of Cambridge.

One of the key reasons the architect was selected was because Stapczynski and Bach feel it will work well with the public, they said.

"The architect and the committee will start work at the end of this month or early in July," says Stapczynski, "to come up with a design and put some costs around that design so we have something to take to Town Meeting."

By January, the architect must let the town know how expensive the project will be, because Andover plans to ask for the funds at 2000 Town Meeting.

Bach says the process is underway to create the educational specifications for the project.

POLICE LOG

ARRESTS

Wednesday, June 9 - At 2:01 a.m., Jamie M. Crespo, 26, of 15 Royal Crest Drive, North Andover, was arrested on Haverhill Street and charged with giving a false name or address to an officer and driving with a suspended license.

Thursday, June 10 - At 2 a.m., William Sutherland, 20, of 17 Kenilworth St., Andover, was arrested at Recreation Park and charged with being a disorderly person. He was taken into protective custody.

Sutherland had called from Rec Park saying his vehicle had been stolen about 30 to 40 minutes earlier. At approximately 1:30 a.m., eight people had called the police station when Sutherland's car was involved in an accident at 84 Summer St. The car came to a stop on the lawn and the fire department was called because the engine had a burning smell. Officers found the keys to Sutherland's car still in the ignition, and fresh groceries in the back of the car from a store on Route 114. North Andover reported a vehicle had hit a pole on Route 114 and took off down Route 125 toward Andover around the same time these calls came to the Andover station. An officer filed a criminal application on Sutherland for filing a false stolen motor vehicle report.

After Sutherland allegedly attempted suicide by trying to strangle himself with his sock he was stripped down and taken to a hospital for evaluation.

At 6:13 p.m., Marie E. Burns, 50, of 17 Memorial Circle, Andover, was arrested at her home and charged on warrants for a vehicle violation and larceny under $250.

At 7:57 p.m., Jacquelin Correia, 25, of 59 Dracut St., Lawrence, was arrested on Union Street and charged on a warrant.

At 12:38 p.m., Sean F. Farnham, 35, of 31 Jackson St., Lawrence, was arrested on North Main Street and charged on a warrant for a motor vehicle violation.

Friday, June 11 - At 2:10 a.m., Todd N. Cassista, 21, of 7 Hamlet St., Lawrence, was arrested on North Main Street and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and failing to stay in marked lanes.

Saturday, June 12 - At 8:36 p.m., James E. Holland, 28, of 437 North Main St., Andover, was arrested at Memorial Circle and charged with assault and battery.

At 11:40 p.m., Ashish Brahma, 54, of 3 Starr Avenue West, Andover, was arrested at his home and charged with assault and battery.

Sunday, June 13 - At 4:45 p.m., a sergeant reported seeing two males chasing a kid on a bike in Shawsheen Square. A McDonald's employee reported two kids had just had their bikes stolen. A 14-year-old, and two 13-year-old Lawrence males were arrested and charged with larceny of property worth more than $250.

Monday, June 14 - At 8:36 p.m., Joani N. Reed, 40, of 6 Bowdoin Avenue, Dorchester, was arrested on Main Street and charged on three warrants for failure to pay fines, and one for failure to appear.

Tuesday, June 15 - At 5:36 a.m., Charles D. Ball, 35, of 586 Haverhill St., Lawrence, was arrested on Interstate 93 and charged with driving an uninsured vehicle with revoked plates and a revoked license.

At 12:54 p.m., a 16-year-old North Andover male was arrested on Main Street and charged with shoplifting.

INCIDENTS

Wednesday, June 9 - At 2:15 a.m., an Andover man reported he had had an argument with his son earlier and his son had still not returned home. Around 4:30 a.m., an officer found the son, spoke with him, and brought him home.

At 7:04 p.m., the Greater Lawrence Technical School reported they were "having a problem with the media." At 7:50 p.m., the superintendent reported wanting someone to move the Channel 4 news truck off the property. Officers spoke with both sides, reporting "all have agreed on where the trucks will park, and no one will speak with the students."

Thursday, June 10 - At 1:21 a.m., after an Oriole Drive caller reported two horses in the middle of the road, officers corralled the animals and located their owner.

At 7:14 a.m., Suzan Kamm came into the station to drop off a copy of the canceled restraining order against her estranged husband James Kartell. Kartell is accused of murdering Kamm's fiancé when both men came to visit her at Holy Family Hospital. (See story, page 10.)

At 11:14 a.m., a woman requested an officer to assist her with collecting papers that she had mistakenly left on the roof of her car. The papers were in the North Main Street roadway, and the woman had a child with her in the car.

At noon, a detective was to file on a truant student.

At 3:54 p.m., a resident reported she had been followed home the past two days by a male who claimed to be a police officer, but who, when asked, refused to produce ID. The woman knew the license plate of the vehicle that had been following her.

At 5:55 p.m., a River Street resident reported

Brush fire takes long hose to quench

By Neil Fater

Andover firefighters needed to snake 3,000 feet of hose from a Lawrence hydrant Friday to squelch a fire that burned woods behind Temple Emanuel's cemetery on the Lawrence-Andover line.

The fire started in some woods near Interstate 495 and was spread over about two acres. Firefighters say the area has had problems before.

"There's a lot of activity back there, a lot of trails and a lot of bikes," said Deputy Chief Chuck Murnane, as he watched firefighters continue to cool charred earth Friday. "This has been a hot spot in the past. Years ago, we used to live up here."

Because of the recurring problem, Fire Chief Harold Wright says he hopes to work with the Andover congregation that controls the cemetery to improve emergency access or provide more water to the cemetery.

Rabbi Robert Goldstein says fires haven't been a problem in that area at least during the nine years he has been at the temple.

But the narrow entrance to the cemetery from Mt. Vernon Street in Lawrence makes it difficult for pumper fire trucks to squeeze into the access road, and there are no hydrants inside the cemetery, says Wright.

"It's a very narrow opening to get in there. If we need a tremendous amount of water, we have to connect to a hydrant on Mt. Vernon Street and lay a line across the street," says Wright. "I really don't like to have the large trucks in there, and would like to have hydrants, but if the trucks have to be in there, then they have to at least widen the entrance."

Wright also wants to clean up debris in the woods, so it will not contribute to potential fires. "Apparently they were clearing trees out there, so there's a lot of logs," says Murnane.

It's that way — Mickey Connor of the Andover Fire Department points to the smoky haze in the Temple Emanuel Cemetery.

Firefighters Friday had to use 3,000 feet of hose to pump water from a Mt. Vernon Street hydrant to the fire.

Although two Andover brush trucks, two Andover pumper trucks and a Lawrence engine responded to the scene, the fire was originally fought only by the pickup-sized brush trucks holding about 100 gallons of water. The larger trucks could not get back into the woods.

Murnane says it took firefighters at least 30 minutes to snake the hose they needed.

"We didn't have much water (in the brush trucks) and the fire was in close to the highway," said Murnane. "We surrounded it, but we were just not going to get it out if we didn't hook into a hydrant."

Murnane says that by the time the hose was hooked to the hydrant and brought back to the fire, "we had hardly any water left in the pumps."

The woods behind the cemetery is a popular spot for people on motor bikes, particularly after school gets out for the year, says Murnane.

"Kids on dirt bikes showed us into the actual scene of the fire," he says.

INTRODUCING THE WOUND CARE CENTER®

hope for wounds that won't heal.

For someone with diabetes or poor circulation, a simple foot wound or sore can have a devastating impact on their life. Limited blood flow can slow the body's own healing process. The wound refuses to heal, and may eventually lead to gangrene and amputation.

We've opened the Wound Care Center to help save people with wounds that won't heal from a life of unrelenting suffering and distress. At the Wound Care Center, a dedicated team of physicians, nurses and technicians uses the latest technologies to help heal wounds.

If you know someone with a wound that won't heal, suggest that they ask their physician about the Wound Care Center or have them call us directly.

Phased Out

June is the time for many of life's milestones. There are new partners, because of all the weddings. There are new temps, because of all the college graduations. There are new bathing suits, because of all the weight gain.

But most of life's milestones don't follow the Gregorian calendar. Sometimes there isn't a big ceremony like a wedding to let you know you've reached a new phase.

So, in case you have trouble recognizing when you've reached a new place in life, here's a cheat sheet you can take with you.

You're no longer a BABY when:

- People who gag when they make eye contact with you no longer tell your parents you're "sooo cute."
- Your family no longer gets excited when you say "Mama" — to the cat, the garbage disposal, the drapes...

You're no longer a TODDLER when:

- People start getting annoyed when you put mashed vegetables in your ear.
- No one claps when you flush.

You're no longer a KID when:

- Mowing the lawn is something you dread, rather than look forward to.
- You stop adding "and a half" to your age.

You're no longer a TEEN-AGER when:

- Involuntary eye rolling stops following a parental statement such as "Nice day."
- You're surprised to find a pimple on your face.

You're no longer a COLLEGE-AGED when:

- You shave out of habit, rather than because of a court order.
- It doesn't take a holiday for you to wear something ironed.

You're no longer a NEWCOMER TO ADULTHOOD when:

- May rolls around and you don't think "Who am I going to room with?"
- You stop buying new underwear every time you run out of clean ones.

You're no longer AS YOUNG AS YOU THOUGHT when:

- Waitstaff wink at the other people at your table when they ask for your ID.
- You think the oldies station plays too much "new-fangled" music.
- You consider a good gift to be:
 - (a) something you can use at work;
 - (b) something you can return easily; or
 - (c) something that doesn't take up too much space in the closet filled with clothes older than your paperboy.

'A Midsummer Night's Dream' — at the Andover Community Skate Park

By Neil Fater

Andover Youth Services wants to make a dramatic dream come true this midsummer at the Andover skate park.

Specifically, it wants actors, skateboarders, stagehands and musicians to come together and create Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream, on Aug. 11, the eve of midsummer.

The plan is for skaters to play the more-than-mortal fairies in the play, and bands will be needed in specific scenes.

An informational meeting to answer questions from interested Bard-lovers, bands and 'boarders will be held next Wednesday, June 23, at 6:30 p.m. in the skate park behind West Middle School.

Auditions for the roles will be held July 2.

Backed by the organizational powers of Gray Road's Carole Chanler and Youth Services, recent Phillips Academy grad Faran Krentcil will direct the play. Krentcil directed six shows at Phillips, including The Complete Works of William Shakespeare, Abridged, a one-and-a-half-hour comedic show she says spoofed all 32 Shakespeare productions.

Krentcil and Chanler are hoping the Midsummer production will launch an annual Shakespeare in the Skate Park tradition.

"Hopefully, if all goes well, we can pass the project on to other people every year," says Krentcil.

Krentcil figures on using between eight and 16 actors to play the 22 parts.

If enough skateboarders audition, she will have the 'boarders play the parts of the magical fairies, who can do things mortals in the play can not.

The fairies will be dressed in crazy skater clothes, the regular teens in hyped up club gear, and the court of Athens in Abercrombie, she says.

Bands will be needed to provide the music to Shakespeare's songs.

"In Shakespeare's time everything was a musical. It's written into the script," she says. "We need some band to take the lyrics and put it to their own music."

But despite the use of bands, 'boards and modern clothing, Krentcil doesn't like anyone to say Youth Services is "modernizing" the play, because Shakespeare's words will not be altered.

"It's already modern," she says of the play.

"The concepts in his plays exist today," says Krentcil. "There are plays about race relations. There are plays about gang violence. Everything's the same, (but) now we have guns instead of swords."

Krentcil believes the skate park will serve as a fine backdrop for A Midsummer Night's Dream, both because of its size and artistic qualities.

She hopes having the play there will also bring together skaters and those who aren't sure the park is such a great thing for the town.

"To me, the skate park also seems a big source of friction," she says.

Krentcil, who has acted in several Shakespeare plays including Midsummer, says youths shouldn't be intimidated by Shakespeare's writing, because the story line is something everyone can appreciate.

"It's so simple. It's the most basic of concepts. You have true love, you have rivalry and you have people looking for a good time," she says. "And it all comes together on stage."

*'It's so simple...
You have true love,
you have rivalry and you have people looking for a good time.
And it all comes together on stage.'*

Children's Studio for the Arts enters its 6th season

Registration for Children's Studio for the Arts, a program for students entering grades 2-6, held at South School July 12-30, is continuing. Children can participate in one-, two- or three-week sessions. The staff is comprised of professionals in each artistic field.

The program offers exposure to all areas of the arts through a variety of performances, exhibits, and guest artists, while students' individual creative skills and talents are developed through workshops in visual arts, drama, music, and movement dance.

Children in CSA Junior (grades

2-3) will participate in an integrated program, while older students will choose an area of concentration. A public performance highlighting the students' artistic work will be held each Friday afternoon.

Internships are available for seventh- and eighth-grade students who previously attended CSA.

Summer Theater Ensemble, an outgrowth of Children's Studio for the Arts, will be held at the Collins Center in July, and involve 19 young people from grades 7-10 in two performances of Once on This Island on Aug. 6 and 7. Auditions for this program were held in May.

Brochures and registration for Children's Studio for the Arts and CSA Junior are at the Department of Community Services on Bartlet Street or by calling 623-8277.

For more information about the programs, call the director at 475-3319.

The Rattler! The most feared and venomous snake in the U.S., the deadly pit viper does what it wants.

But, after hours of basking in the summer sun, the snake senses that it must take a break from the blistering heat...

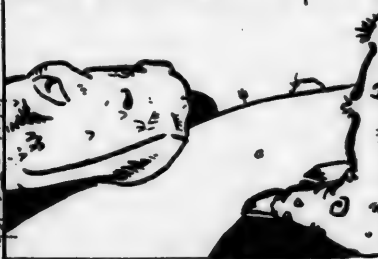

Or it will surely PERISH!

A slave to its climate, the rattler feels its blood begin to thicken. It tries to slither to the cool safety of its playground.

But, tragically, an unfeeling desert animal blocks its path.

Your Dental HEALTH

by Richard D. Hoppgood, D.M.D., F.A.G.D.

A DRYING EXPERIENCE

Patients should be aware that certain medications can limit saliva production to the point where it poses an increased risk for cavities, gum disease, and denture problems. The most recent evidence of medication-induced dry mouth comes in a report from the Netherlands in which antidepressants were seen to produce the side effect. Dentists encourage patients who take such medications to increase the frequency of dental exams to every four months (instead of the usual six). In addition to brushing after every meal and flossing daily, such patients should also chew sugar-free gum and suck on lemon sugar-free lozenges to stimulate saliva production. There are also moisturizing solutions available to counteract dry mouth.

If you are bothered by this condition, don't be shy about discussing "dry mouth" with your dentist. Professional care is always the best avenue to pursue when unusual symptoms occur. We're also here for gentle, family dentistry - routine maintenance care including cleanings, X-rays, fillings, cosmetic dentistry, etc. Was it so long since your last dental visit that you can't remember when it was? Then it is time to call us at 475-2431, 296 Lowell Street, Rt 133, with easy access off Rt 93.

P.S. Saliva performs the very important functions of keeping gums lubricated and remineralizing tooth enamel.

Third annual Citizens Who Care exhibit opens at the library

The Citizens Who Care display, a project of the Rotary Club of Andover, is on display at Memorial Hall Library. The exhibit, which honors residents from the Andovers who have contributed to the community, was officially unveiled last month at a reception that hosted the 10 recipients.

More than 100 people and associations submitted nomination forms and a committee of five Rotarians made the final selection. Mark Spencer, owner of Carriage House Photography, then photographed the 10 in places that were symbolic of their achievements and wrote biographies that accompany the portraits. The recipients for this year's award and their achievements follow.

Roseanne Dinuccio has volunteered extensively at St. Michael's Church and the chapel at Merrimack College.

Jerry Silverman recently retired after 18 years as an Andover selectman. Among his accomplishments are heading the July 4 fireworks drive and presiding over the Andover Education Improvement Association.

Cindy Rayner has given much of her time at Bancroft School, writes articles for Town Crossings and develops curriculum for Free Christian Church.

Andover's A Better Chance (ABC) owes much of its success to William Washburn. Bill has also volunteered at South Church, West Parish Church and North Parish Unitarian Church.

Many small business owners owe a debt to Walter Wertheimer for his counseling as a SCORE (Counselors to Small Business) volunteer. He has also helped Russian Jewish emigres settle in the Merrimack Valley.

Jan Burkholder has served as president of the Lower Merrimack Valley Regional Employment Board, Greater Lawrence Habitat for Humanity and Capital Fund Drive chairperson for Greater Lawrence YWCA.

Jim Batchelder was selected from the teaching ranks of Andover High School for making art relevant and exciting to his students. He has also spearheaded collections and studies for the Andover Historical Society.

Young girls and hiking trails have benefited from Elizabeth Tentarelli. The Andover volunteer has held key positions in the Girl Scouts, AVIS (Andover Village Improvement Society), and Andover Trails Committee.

Tallie Abernathy has put in full time hours as a part-time worker at North Andover Youth Services. She also coordinated the student involvement with Habitat for Humanity and, since 1995, has choreographed every play at North Andover Middle School.

This past year's high school recipient is Brianne Barrett. During her high school years she led student efforts to heighten awareness of disabilities, cultural diversity and alcohol abuse.

The exhibit will remain in the library through the end of the month and will move each month to a different public building or bank. In July it will be on display in the Lawrence Savings Bank in North Andover. This is the first year that input is being actively solicited from the public. Nomination forms are available through the end of the month at the Memorial Hall Library and at several businesses in Andover and North Andover. Residents of the two towns are encouraged to submit as many as eight names of individuals who have given their time at their own expense to make their communities better places to live. For more information, call Mark Spencer at 749-9593.

American Red Cross plans safety glasses

Courtesy tags for out-of-state motorists are being prepared by Police Chief George A. Dane and will be placed upon all such cars found to be violating the traffic laws. Andover's five playgrounds will open for the season Monday under the supervision of the Recreation committee and its staff of supervisors headed by James D. Doherty.

The Topping Road sewer with eight new manholes has been installed by employees of the board of public works. The new 1950-foot extension of the town's water system, which took about three weeks to install, is a six-inch line to give service to residents on that road.

The bathing beach at Pomp's Pond will be open Monday for supervised swimming and classes in life-saving.

The worst June drought in recent years, which caused widespread crop damage in all New England states, placed an extra load on the local water service and saw three all-time records broken at the pumping station on Lowell Street last week.

Scores of Ballardvale residents have signed the petitions being circulated there protesting the installation of automatic gates at the Andover street railroad crossing in that district.

Andover bus commuters may be left stranded by a state House of Representatives budget proposal that would eradicate private bus company funding. If the House's budget plan is approved, Dracut-based Trombly Commuter Lines would lose a $204,000 annual subsidy - a loss that could force it out of business or cut deeply into rider services.

Marsha Bates of the Bank of Boston and member of the Northeast Region Lead By Example Scholarship Committee, announced that Grace Park, a junior at Andover High School, has been selected as a regional semifinalist for the Lead By Example Scholarships, which Bank of Boston funds as part of its sponsorship of the Bay State Games, Massachusetts' Olympic Sports Festival.

Wilson helps unite the United Way

By Chris Young

Corporate downsizing, the North American Free Trade Agreement and welfare-to-work all mean the same thing to Andover's Len Wilson — that America must retrain people for new jobs.

Wilson, chairman and CEO of First Essex Bank, serves on many charitable boards. But in the current booming economy, he says, he is focusing on organizations that retrain working people who are barely making ends meet.

"We're concerned with lifting people from the trap of subsistence jobs and engaging them in the system," he says. "Whatever the cause of their problems, we have to retrain workers for the new jobs so they can be permanently employed."

As chairman of the Lower Merrimack Valley Regional Employment Board and a director of the National Association of Private Industry Councils, he believes he is helping the local economy while giving people the opportunity to learn new skills.

He volunteers for the United Way of Merrimack Valley for the same reason, because it helps people who are temporarily down and out.

In the campaign gearing up for September, Wilson is recruiting young professionals from local companies to help with the busiest part of the campaign. The arrangement, called the Loaned Executive Program, benefits both sides, Wilson says. The United Way gains exceptional volunteers and the executives gain skills and contacts they might not get in their corporate setting.

Len Wilson is a smart banker who knows that what is good for the community is good for the bank, says Peter Vanier, director of the local employment board. Because of his warm nature, he is as effective in a roomful of union people as he is in a business meeting.

"Len has the unique ability to reach out to people," Vanier says. "He's got a good heart and it comes through to people." Massachusetts will spend $18 million over the next two years, retraining people for higher paying jobs, Wilson says and the employment board will manage the Lawrence area share. This spring, two local companies — Lawrence Pumps and MKS in Andover were awarded grants to retrain workers.

Although a relative newcomer to the region — Wilson came to the Merrimack Valley from the Springfield area in 1988 — he is totally immersed in local charities.

"I do it, first because my mother told me to, and second because it's good for me tax-wise." He says he learned at his mother's knee that to whom much is given, much is expected.

"I've been a pretty lucky guy in my life and I should do more," he says energetically, leaning elbows on his seven-foot mahogany desk. A baseball signed by Ted Williams at the opening of the tunnel lies next to a "Torrissi for Representative" sign. "I held a sign for David," he explains. His office, decorated with mementos of Boy Scouts awards and photographs he has taken, is in the former Andover Post Office on Main Street, which First Essex renovated and moved into in 1997.

In addition to the United Way and the Employment Board, Wilson works with Adelante (Move Along), a support program for teens run by the Rev. Joachim Lally, CDS, at the former St. Ann Church in Lawrence and Neighbors in Need food pantry. He serves on the governing board at South Congregational Church in Andover and has been active in scouting most of his life. Wilson, a native of Ashburnham, and his wife, Florence, live in Andover. Their son, David, is a health care economist and has two children. Daughter Lynn, is a writer and edits Arthritis Today. Chrissie, who with her husband, John, lives in Ashburnham, works for Upward Bound, a bootstrap organization that helps troubled teens.

Wilson — His mother told him to do it, and it's good for him tax-wise.

"They all do work that makes me proud," he says.

Dr. Warren A. Maddox, Jr.

Maddox Chiropractic

Dr. Warren Maddox, Jr. has been practicing chiropractic medicine since 1983. After three years of practicing with Killeen Chiropractic in Lawrence, Dr. Maddox opened his own practice in Londonderry, N.H., and recently opened an in-home office in Andover.

Dr. Maddox is a native of Andover and the son of retired Andover police officer, Warren Maddox, Sr. He chose to build his Andover office on the last remaining parcel of land belonging to the Maddox family since 1895. He now sees patients at 180 River Road in Andover.

Dr. Maddox's chiropractic treatment focuses towards musculo-skeletal painless conditions resulting from im-balances in the body, stress, and repetitive activity. He treats home, work, and auto related injuries. In addition to painless manipulative procedures, Dr. Maddox provides "gentle care" alternative treatments, such as electro-muscular stimulation and ultrasound. Dr. Maddox believes that there is a process to heal and what may take one individual's injury a short time to heal, may take another a longer period of time to heal. He encourages in-home exercises to promote a level of flexibility in order to prevent the severity of the problem reoccurring. The exercises are rehabilitating and enhances the treatment process. "Treatments are specific to the individual with regard to the extent of their condition," said Dr. Maddox.

Dr. Maddox is a provider for most insurance companies and states that one does not necessarily need a referral from their physician to have their chiropractic treatment covered by insurance.

Call Dr. Maddox's office at (978) 557-8200 for office hours and appointments. His 24-hour answering service is readily available to take your call. His office is located at 180 River Rd., Andover, 1/2 mile off off Rt. 93N, traveling towards Tewksbury.

Also, brothers Robert and Peter Colombo, both opticians and both of Andover, are part owners in the new venture.

CMGI posts quarterly loss

The quarterly financial news went from positive to negative for Andover's CMGI, which reported a net loss of $27.8 million for the quarter ending April 30, compared to a $13-million profit for the previous quarter, which ended Jan. 31.

The company's stock price is also down from a high of nearly 156 in April to 79.69 Tuesday. Just prior to last week's announcement, it was trading in the high 90s.

The announcement, and subsequent decline came just days after a lead business story on CMGI in the Boston Globe, which took note of the decline in Internet stocks in general, and wondered what that meant for a company "whose entire business is based on the ability to fund and nurture young Web enterprises, often leading to an initial public stock offering."

CMGI now has 40 Internet companies in its investment portfolio. One of its most spectacular successes was its 80-percent investment in search engine Lycos Inc. in 1995 for $2 million. While its percent share of the company has dropped to 20 percent, that share is now worth $500 million.

The most recent quarter's results included a pre-tax gain of $859,000 on issuance of stock by GeoCities and a one-time research and development charge of $4.5 million, related to the acquisition of Internet Profiles Corp.

The previous quarter's profit included pre-tax gains of $43.6 million on the sale of Lycos stock.

Warriors watch their tournament run end at LeLacheur Park

By Rick Harrison

LOWELL — Even the inside-out rally caps in the bottom of the ninth weren't enough for the Golden Warriors.

And you knew the three-hour slugfest was officially over when Andover head coach Ken Maglio finally surrendered his ever-present fungo bat with two out in the ninth and one strike on the final batter.

St. John's Prep reliever Duncan Webb pitched 5 1/3 innings of four-hit ball, and his teammates broke a 7-7 tie with four runs in the seventh and two in the eighth, as SJP outlasted Andover 13-7 in their MIAA Division 1 North Tournament championship baseball game before 1,500 fans at immaculately-groomed Edward A. LeLacheur Park.

SJP (15-9), which entered the tourney as the 19th seed, squandered an early 7-0 lead when the Golden Warriors rallied for six runs in the fourth and the equalizer in the fifth.

Andy Yanchus' 410-foot three-run homer — with two outs in the seventh — was the key stroke for SJP. Starting pitcher Eric Shepperson added a two-run homer and Jake Marsello drilled a three-run double in the first for the Cinderella champs.

For Andover, which ended its season 17-7, No. 9 batter Sean Lawton was 3-for-4 with a double and two RBI in the title game.

Kevin Barry contributed a two-run double, Rick Johnson an RBI triple and Mark Rocca had two hits.

SJP advanced to the state semifinals earlier this week at Braintree High against Framingham, a surprise 3-1 winner over Boston College High in the Division 1 South title game.

Andover reached the North final with a well-played 3-2 victory over Peabody in a semifinal squeaker at Fraser Field in Lynn.

SJP's semifinal win was a convincing 12-2 romp over Chelmsford at Alumni Field in Lowell.

This marked the sixth time this decade Andover reached the Division 1 North title game. They have a 3-3 record in those six games.

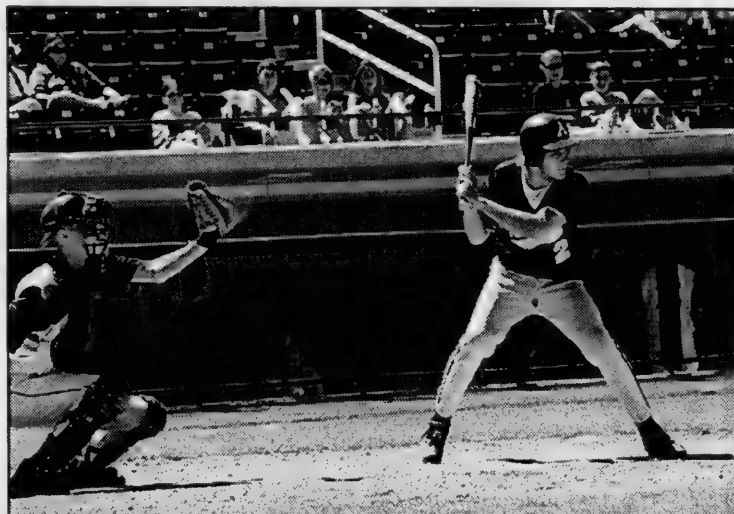

Head coach Ken Maglio ended the season with a 125-38 record over seven years.

The Golden Warriors played St. John's Prep once before in a North final, Mark O'Sullivan pitching and batting the locals to a convincing 9-2 win two years ago before Brockton ousted Andover 14-3 in the state semifinals.

O'Sullivan, Rob Busby (WPI) and Steve Vickers (Bentley) were among the members of that 1997 team spotted in the crowd at LeLacheur.

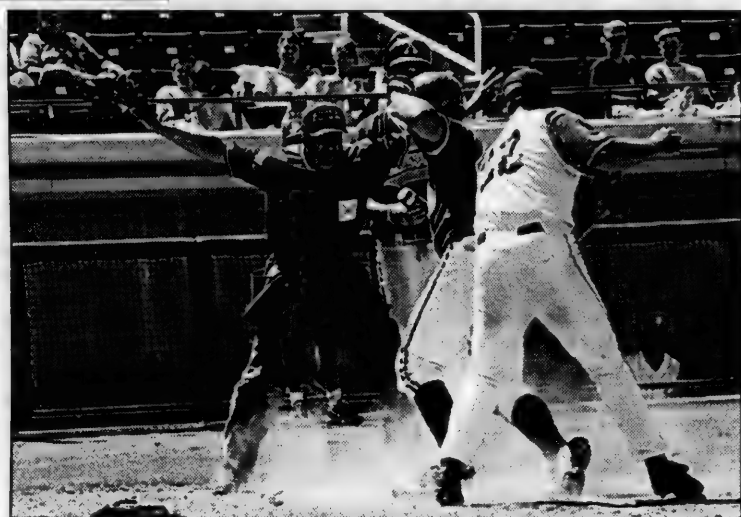

Warriors, You're Still No. 1 with Me — Andover head coach Ken Maglio, with his ever-present fungo bat, signals the infield during batting practice. Maglio finished the season with a 125-38 record during the last seven years.

Rick Johnson patiently waits for his pitch. Johnson hit a 400-foot RBI triple in the MIAA Division 1 North Tournament championship baseball game.

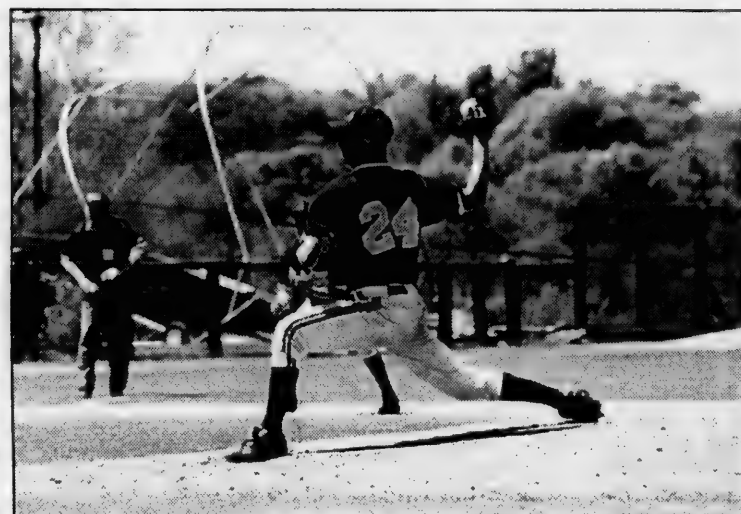

Mark Rocca (No. 12) takes off for second base. Andy Belistri (No. 17) is the first-base coach.

Rich Sheldon (scoring) gave Andover one of its seven runs, but St. John's Prep broke a 7-7 tie with four runs in the seventh and two in the eighth to win 13-7 at LeLacheur Park.

Andover starting pitcher Jason Daley pushes off the mound.

A scoring celebration at home plate, at Andover's last baseball game of the season. Three wins away, AHS had its championship hopes ended by St. John's Prep, 13-7.

Jason Caverly, who also played on that AHS team, was in the dugout as a volunteer assistant coach while senior catcher Ryan Hanigan is the only member of this year's team that was also on the '97 squad.

Another outstanding pitching performance by Villanova University-bound senior righthander Mark Rocca, coupled with continued defensive excellence, carried the Golden Warriors to the impressive semifinal round victory at Fraser Field in Lynn.

Rocca, 9-0 with one save, fired a complete-game six-hitter with nine strikeouts and six walks. He threw 138 pitches five days after his 134-pitch first-round triumph over Waltham.

"Rocca just got stronger and stronger as the game went along," said AHS head coach Ken Maglio, much the same as sophomore lefty Kevin Shepard two days earlier in the 4-3 quarterfinal win over Lowell.

The AHS ace had to be that good to beat Tanners' flamethrower Peter Soteropoulos (8-2), whose only two losses this spring came against Andover (10-7 in season opener).

University of Connecticut recruit Soteropoulos also went the distance, yielding eight hits and striking out an eye-popping 17 Golden Warriors while issuing only two walks.

"It was a tremendous game — very well played on both sides," said Maglio. "It's the best we've looked defensively this season."

"Tonight (catcher Ryan) Hanigan and (second baseman Christian) Sempere were fantastic."

Hanigan threw out two Peabody baserunners trying to steal second and third. Sempere, who finished with four putouts and three assists, made a leaping catch of a line drive and ended another potential rally with an over-the-shoulder, back-to-the-plate running catch in right-centerfield.

Peabody inched ahead 1-0 in the bottom of the first, but the locals bounced back with a pair of runs in the third.

Rick Johnson beat out an infield single, sophomore Danny Hughes laced an opposite-field single to left, and with two outs Hanigan drilled a clutch two-run single to center.

The winning run crossed in the fifth when Rocca laced a two-out single to center, advanced on a passed ball, and raced across on Hanigan's single to right.

The Tanners cut the deficit to 3-2 with a run in the seventh, and made things interesting in the bottom of the ninth.

A walk and Dan Lamonica's bunt single, sandwiched around an unsuccessful sacrifice bunt, put the tying and winning runs on base with one out.

Chris Kimmel then chopped a ball up the middle which AHS shortstop Johnson fielded, tagging second base for the second out.

With runners at the corners, another grounder up the middle was again scooped by Johnson who stepped on the bag to end the game.

The top four batters in the Andover order produced all eight hits. Hanigan was 3-for-3 and drove in all three runs. Rocca, who usually hits better when he pitches, contributed a double and single. Danny Hughes had two singles and Johnson the infield hit.

Kimmel, Paul Spatafora (double) and Lamonica had two safeties each to account for the Peabody offense.

The Golden Warriors beat Greater Boston League champ Peabody in two of three meetings this spring.

"Niz (Peabody coach Ed Nizwantowski) and the kids on his team are great to play against," said Maglio. "There is tremendous mutual respect between us and Peabody. They took the loss with class."

"It feels great to be sitting here at 17-6," said Maglio. "Not too many people thought we could do it this year."

CHAMPIONSHIP GAME

St. John's Prep 13

Andover 7

The title game started poorly for the locals who never had the lead.

AHS fell behind 3-0 in the top of the first when two walks and a hit batsman loaded the bases for Jake Marsello, who drilled a three-run double to left off starting and losing pitcher Jason Daley.

The Golden Warriors managed only a second-inning lead-off single by Ryan Hanigan against SJP starter Eric Shepperson in the first three frames.

The Eagles built the lead to 7-0 in the top of the fourth, all the damage occurring after the first two batters went down easily.

No. 9 hitter Jason Piantedosi blooped a double to right, one of several balls lost in the brutal sun field by players on both sides.

That opened the floodgates, unfortunately, as Ryan Leahy and Kevin Goodhue followed with RBI singles and Shepperson lined a 350-foot two-run homer over the left field fence.

Andover chased Shepperson in the bottom of the inning, however, sending 12 batters to the plate and scoring six runs.

Mark Rocca singled to left field and Hanigan walked to start the uprising. After a popout, Kevin Barry ripped a two-run double to left to put AHS on the board.

Rich Sheldon was hit by a pitch, and with two outs Sean Playing their final game for Andover vs. St. John's Prep were seniors and captains (from left) Ryan Hanigan, Jason Daley and Rick Johnson. Other seniors on the team are Mark Rocca, Christian Sempere, Kevin Barry, Nick Branzetti, Charlie Daher and Frank Fitzpatrick.

Lawton's seemingly-routine fly to right was lost in the sun for an RBI single.

Sheldon raced across on a wild pitch, and Rick Johnson tripled to the 400-foot sign in straightaway center to score Lawton with the fifth run.

DH Danny Hughes walked and Rocca chased Shepperson with his second single of the inning to make it 7-6.

Reliever Duncan Webb walked Hanigan to load the bases, and the 20-minute inning finally ended on a key defensive play by SJP second baseman Piantedosi and Webb.

Sophomore Kevin Shepard lashed a hard grounder that appeared ticketed for right field and two more runs. But Piantedosi made a diving stop to his left — and from his knees threw to Webb covering first. Shepard was called out in a very close play as he flashed across the bag.

The Golden Warriors' uphill climb ended in the fifth, when Sheldon dumped a one-out single to center and scored on Lawton's long two-out double to right to tie the game 7-7.

Webb settled down over the final four innings, however, retiring eight straight AHS batters during one stretch.

SJP finally knocked Daley out of the box in the seventh. Kevin Goodhue drew a leadoff walk, and with one out DH John Freni was hit by a pitch before Tom Mackor singled home the go-ahead run.

Marsello walked and coach's son Andy Yanchus yanked a three-run homer over the right field fence onto Aiken Street about 410 feet away.

The Eagles added two more insurance runs off relievers Jeff Volinski and Charlie Daher in the eighth. Leahy doubled and Goodhue lashed an RBI single off Volinski. Freni later drilled a run-scoring double off Daher for the 13-7 final.

Daher allowed only that one hit and struck out two in two creditable innings.

Andover's last gasp came in the eighth. Lawton laced his third hit, a single to center, Johnson forced him at second and Hughes spiked a single to left.

A wild pickoff throw advanced the runners into scoring position, but Webb retired the dangerous Rocca on a fly ball to right to end the inning.

Andover went 1-2-3 in the ninth on a pair of lazy fly balls to center and a strikeout.

Defensive standouts for errorless Andover were shortstop Johnson (three assists, two putouts), catcher Hanigan who gunned down a would-be basestealer and handled every ball in the dirt, and rightfielder Shepard who battled the sun all afternoon and only lost once.

Abby Harris of Andover was recently elected captain of next fall's Union College women's varsity soccer team.

Harris, a junior, is a standout for the Dutchwomen in both soccer and women's lacrosse.

The Phillips Academy graduate opened the recently-completed lacrosse season with four goals and an assist in a 19-11 win over Wellesley. She added two goals in a 12-6 loss to nationally-ranked Tufts and three goals, two assists in a loss to nationally-ranked William Smith College.

She had a combined nine goals and five assists in the next three games, all Union victories, including a season-high five goals in a 14-9 win over Vassar College.

A three-year starter for the Dutchwomen, Harris finished her freshman season with 16 goals and one assist, and had 29 goals and 20 assists last spring.

Harris was a second-team Upstate Collegiate Athletic Association All-Conference selection last year.

She is also a three-year starter and two-time All-Conference choice at midfield in women's soccer, helping Union to a best-ever 13-1-1 record last fall.

She will enter her senior soccer season with 18 career goals and 14 assists.

Slattery's first loss of the season ends hopes for state individual tennis title

BROOKLINE — North Sectional boys singles champion Justin Slattery of Andover fell two wins shy of a State individual tennis title, bowing in the tournament semifinals at Longwood Cricket Club.

Slattery, who plays No. 1 for Central Catholic and is a two-time Merrimack Valley Conference Player-of-the-Year, suffered his first loss of the season when Will Shaw of state team semifinalist Norwell High swept their match 6-4, 6-4.

Shaw was then beaten for the first time in a three-set final.

Warrior Baseball School starts June 28

The sixth annual Andover Warrior Baseball School, for youngsters ages 7-15 years, will be held in three weekly sessions this summer at the West Middle School fields.

The school hours are 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., Monday through Friday, with Session 1 June 28 to July 2, Session 2 July 5-9 and Session 3 July 12-16.

Interested youngsters are urged to apply early as enrollment is limited.

The cost is $135 per week.

The director is Andover High head varsity baseball coach Ken Maglio. Assistant directors are AHS freshman coach Rich Robinson and Dave Gangi, with past and present Andover High players completing the staff.

Fundamentals of hitting, bunting, fielding, throwing and catching the ball will be stressed. There will be specific drills for pitchers, catchers, infielders, outfielders and tips on baselining.

Campers will be grouped according to age and ability.

Program highlights include drill stations, individual evaluations, daily games, school T-shirt and awards.

Maglio is a three-time Merrimack Valley Conference Coach of the Year in 1993, 1996 and 1997. His teams have won three league titles, five Lawrence Invitational Tournament titles and two Division 1 North championships (1994, 1997) while compiling a 108-31 won-lost record the past six years.

Maglio has also served as District 1 chairman of the National High School Baseball Coaches Association.

Anyone with questions, or wishing more information, can contact coach Maglio at 978-623-8709 (work) or 603-635-2158 (home).

Senior Safari ...

and future in only five or 10 minutes. Although some readings weren't quite as "on-the-money" as others, most of the seniors were taken aback by the psychics.

The night also represented the last time this group would officially be together as a class, so the yearbook-signing was constant, and a time capsule to be opened at their fifth high school reunion was filled with significant objects brought in by the seniors. At the end of the safari, the class formed a farewell circle, which triggered the emotions of many.

The whole Senior Safari project took a great deal of planning and work, similar to previous years. The main committee consisted of senior co-chairs Joann Twohig and Lynn Willey, along with junior co-chairs Shelia Stone and Sue Rice. There were more than 100 volunteers involved, and many of them helped with fund raising for the event as well. The cost was approximately $15,000, and it was raised through ticket sales and other fund-raising events. This year's safari flourished as always, and it was a great way for the class of 1999 to be together for one last time.

The who, what and why of the Andover Center Association

Who?

The Andover Center Association is a diverse group of businessmen and women whose number-one concern is the well being of downtown Andover. We are a community minded organization. Through collaborative efforts and membership dues, the members of the Andover Center Association strive to make downtown Andover a desirable and pleasant experience for the entire community.

What?

What do we do? The members finance, volunteer their time and services by attending meetings, and planning for our yearly events and programs such as:

- Holiday Open House
- Breakfast with Santa
- Bazaar Days
- Jazz & Java
- Trick or Treat Downtown
- Spring Coloring Contest
- Holiday Lighting & Decorating
- Spring Flower Project
- ... in order to create a downtown where friends and family meet.

Why?

To make Andover a preferred and pleasant shopping area by providing a vibrant and growing downtown. We want to attract new friends and keep old ones coming back!

There's more

We maintain a dialogue with town officials on downtown issues and work with the Greater Lawrence Chamber of Commerce and various groups and committees as opportunities arise. As always, we are determined to strive for more and have an even stronger, more positive impact on downtown Andover.

The following non-profit organizations are participating:

Andover Center Association, Andona Society, Andover Thrift Shop, Andover High School Cheerleaders, Andover Dollars for Scholars, Andover Police and Safety, South Church Auxiliary, Girl Scouts, and the Town of Andover Health Community.

These are the Andover Center Association members. The next time you visit them, why not thank them for their efforts.
